The Cedar Crescent Village (CCV) took another step forward after the Town provided a building permit for the project.

The municipality issued the permit on the north phase of the development's two future buildings. The permit finalizes the structure's design and drawings after meeting all appropriate building code regulations.

The building permit is the CCV's latest regulatory milestone. The project also received a Permit to Take Water in November from the provincial Ministry of Environment Conservation and Parks.

The Cedar Crescent Village is a public-private partnership that will serve as an anchor for the Town's Waterfront Master Plan in Port Elgin. It will allow the Town to make improvements to the Port Elgin Main Beach to make it more accessible, as well as providing more services at the waterfront.

Information on the CCV project -- along with the relevant documents -- can be found HERE.
